Wakefield – “96 Mantras” is the title of artist Anita Muse’s September exhibit at the Gafney Library in Sanbornville. Muse talks about the exhibit this way, ““96 Mantras” is a show of spontaneous drawings collaged to canvas. Most were drawn at odd moments, without planning, using whatever materials were conveniently at hand -- copier paper, yellow tablet paper, graph paper -- so the work is not archival. For that reason, it is not offered for sale but rather for ephemeral enjoyment of a creative experiment.”

Muse further explains her work, “My work is all about color and pattern and how they can be combined to elevate mood and energy. I have adopted the square format almost exclusively and designs develop intuitively from the center. The act of making art is a form of meditation and it is my intention that the viewer be energetically shifted into a higher dimension while viewing the exhibit.”

Anita Muise is a self-taught collage/mixed media artist and former librarian who embraced mid-life crisis, dropped out of the corporate world, and moved to rural New Hampshire to become creatively self-employed. Anita’s Beads on Route 153 in Wakefield, New Hampshire is home to Anita's art gallery which is open during shop hours or by appointment. Visit AnitaNH.com for more information.
